SHUNNED-ERWEAR

By MARAHNE GARVEY

August 8, 2007 -- National Underwear Day was nothing but a party waste for New Yorkers yesterday - many admitted that they don't wear any.

"I go commando so there's no lines - even thongs leave lines." 20-year-old student Ashley Leveling boldly declared in Times Square, steps away from a bew of models from Freshpair wearing nothing but their underwear to promote designer duds.

"Not wearing any lets you breathe a little bit," Leveling said, adding that when she last wore a black cocktail dress to a school event, she didn't bother putting anything on underneath.

"I don't care. No one saw," she said. "It's just more comfortable."
